Cover Page

The German class E94 has been built in greater numbers as a war locomotive. In 1940 another loco has drawn E94 003 out of the factory's hall into the open air, so that the photographer can do his work. The layout scene was built by Jürgen Kottsieper.

January

The Metronom trains are a product of the modern times. For several years it also connects Hanover to Hamburg. The class 146 is going with its five-car train through Lower Saxony to the North. The train has just passed the farm of Kai Wüstermann (Freundeskreis der Spur-Z Hamburg; Friends circle of Z scale Hamburg).

February

February is still a dark month and we meet the steam engine in the light of street lamps. But it is also the month of the international toy fair, and certainly the new products 2010 will make a new ray of hope.

March

On a desert diorama built by John Cubbin under US typical prototypes – Jürg Rüedi has got an identical one – the SD70M of the Union Pacific is leaving with hopper cars of the same company the tunnel exit. It is still early in the morning and the heat still bearable. Photo: Robert J. Kluz

April

The flair of a typical English working-class city Graham Jones has designed on this layout, which he showed us in 2008 during the Geseke Z scale weekend. Last month there has been a new edition of this most important Z scale meeting all over Europe. The just starting intercity train of British Railways reminds us a time when the railroads in England have not been sold to private investors.

This Swiss double unit is called Re 10/10 (by SZL) and pulls a heavy tank car train up the ramps of the "Julierbahn". Nice to see how the red locos raise from the fresh looking spring grass in the Alps. Photo: Jens Wimmel

June

The childhood dream of Götz Guddas is going with a class 89⁷⁰ by Bahls over the river bridge: "Edelweißbahn" – in Z scale created by Götz himself.

July

In Juli we are going to enjoy our holidays on the beach or in the mountains – why not going by train? The class 221 passes by the German Alps with an express train of pre-war passenger cars on Jürgen Kottsieper's module layout.

August

The year is 1905: The opening ceremony's train with the class T3b of „Großherzoglich-Mecklenburgische Friedrich-Franz-Eisenbahn“ is accompanied by 12 white-dressed maidens to Klütz station – along the camera of the photographer. This scene was built by Hubert Halbey historically correct.

September

Red Rock Rail: The EMD SD45 of the Union Pacific (AZL) is pulling a heavy train of modern tank cars, created by Kurt Lück himself in a small series, through the prairie landscape full of big cacti.

October

The days are getting shorter, the nights are cooler - fall is here. On the layout of Andreas Petkelis the low sun conjures with her latest mood-light a romantic twilight scene. Photo: Andreas Petkelis

November

Gray November days are best spent working at Z scale models and layouts. Götz Guddas has created the old Prussian baggage car and a prototype of the later so called "blunderbusses", which are leaving Güglingen station now with a mixed train pulled by engine no. 98 7502.

December

Encounter in the snowy mountains of the American North: At a tunnel exit two freight trains are appearing in front of the photographer's lenses. On the top line a SD70M and a SD40-T2 are going, on the bottom line we see a SD40-2 „Snoot Nose“ together with a SD45. They belong to the railroad companies of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and were emulated by AZL. Photo: Jürg Rüedi
